County Official Opposes Request For Marline Tube

Torrance's request for a bridge or tube across the entrance to the Marina del Rey small boat harbor was described by County Road Commissioner Sam Kennedy this week as "not within the financial ability of the county."

Aptos Scene Of New Home For Murdock

Forty-two years of service to public education on the Pacific Coast will be climaxed June 30, when Dr. and Mrs. Morrest G. Murdock reverse a southern progression to make their permanent home in Aptos.

For the past 11 years, Dr. Murdock has served as president of El Camino College, the institution which he helped to organize from a swamp-like site into one of the nation's most beautiful locations.

In recent weeks, the Murdocks have been honored by the college, civic and community groups, and, most recently, by Pepperdine College, where the veteran college administrator was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of law on June 8.

The bridge had been sought by Torrance and cities in the South Bay to give peninsula area residents better access to the Marina and northern points.

Kennedy recommended denial of the official request made by Torrance, stating that such a bridge or tube would cost $17 million. He said adequate access to the harbor would be provided by Lincoln Blvd., Washington Blvd., and the remaining sections of Pacific Coast Hwy.

Connections of two future freeways at the east side of the marina will be able to handle future north-south traffic, Kennedy said.

The city's request, in the form of a council resolution, pointed out that development of the Playa del Rey marina would sever a major north-south traffic artery. The matter of traffic around the huge marina has been studied by the Inter Cities Highway Committee for more than a year.
